France's Highest Cultural Award Given to Burgess

By PAT ASHALL

Dr. Robert M. Burgess was presented the Chevalier de l'Ordre des Palmes Academiques, the highest cultural decoration presented by France, at a luncheon sponsored by the foreign languages department yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Burgess, chairman of the foreign languages department, was presented the award by Claude Batault, French Consul General from Denver. The decoration is awarded by the President of the French Republic and the Minister of National Education and must be presented in person by an official of the French government.

The decoration presented to Dr. Burgess is the highest cultural distinction presented in the fields of literature and culture. According to the citation, Dr. Burgess received the Palmes Academiques "in appreciation of his remarkable efforts to further the knowledge of the French language and culture in the United States."

Dr. Burgess has been chairman of the foreign language department for eight years. Since his appointment as chairman, both Russian and Italian have been added to the foreign language curriculum.

The history of the Chevalier de l'Ordre des Palmes Academiques stems from the Greeks who awarded their distinguished poets and literary men a crown of palms.

French Consul Says Russians Would Gain by Western Pact

By CARL GIDLUND

Khrushchev would regard a treaty with the West as a means to further Russia's interests, was the warning issued last night by M. Claude Batault, French Consul General from Denver.

He quoted Lenin, who said in 1918 that "A treaty is a means for us to gain strength," and added that there is no reason to suppose that Khrushchev would not view a new treaty in the same light.

Batault spoke last night to an audience of students, townspeople, and educators in the School of Journalism Auditorium.

He said that both President Charles De Gaulle and Paul Henry Spaak, Secretary General of NATO agree that the basic concept of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization should be modified. NATO must not be thought of as a "Maginot Line" which could be outflanked by Communist powers. Rather it should be used as a means of giving technical assistance to underdeveloped areas of the world. Used in this manner, NATO would be a strong weapon in the West's struggle with Russia for non-committed nations.

On the Algerian question, Mr. Batault said that the French Government is hoping for a solution through negotiations within the next few months that will allow Algeria the freedom to decide its own fate.

Commenting on economics, the Consul cited the "overwhelming success" of the common market created by the treaty of Rome which went into effect in January 1959. It also has political implications, the Consul said, as it could be the first step toward a federated Europe. Member nations include France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Italy. It is hoped by the member nations that Great Britain will soon join also.

During his speech Mr. Batault cited the common political viewpoints of the "New France" under De Gaulle and West Germany. He pointed out that they were united in the common struggle against Russian aggression and were joined also by economic and industrial ties. He said that Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany was one of the greatest statesmen alive in his estimation.

Interview With Batault

Summit Conference Hesitation By DeGaulle Has Two Reasons

By JOHN BENNITT

Claude Batault, the French Consul General from Denver, said last night in an interview with the Kaimin that President DeGaulle of France has resisted an immediate "Big Four" summit conference for two reasons.

The first, Batault said, is that De Gaulle wishes the Western powers to enter into discussion with Russia as a unified body.

Batault said that DeGaulle felt that one of the present deterring factors of western unity was the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Batault said that while France would never leave NATO, she desired to expand the organization into an economic as well as military alliance.

De Gaulle, according to Batault, considers the present NATO organization comparable to the Maginot Line (A line of defense constructed before World War II by France to protect her German border) an incomplete system of defense. Batault said that DeGaulle, in a recent press conference, said that Communism is the common enemy of the Western nations and that its inroads are not confined to any front, geographically or economically.

Batault said the second reason for DeGaulle's hesitation about participating in the Summit Conference at an early date is that he (De Gaulle) feels that Communist China will soon be a serious competitor of the Soviet Union economically and militarily. Batault felt it would be more advantageous to the West if Russia had a serious competitor [referring to Red China] in the East as well as in the West.

Algerian Question

Batault said that the guerrilla warfare by Algerian rebels has been instigated by Communist nations. He said that all the leaders of the Algerian revolt have been trained in Communist countries.

Batault emphasized that the war in Algeria is being waged not so much against the French, but primarily against Algerian nationalists who refuse to join the rebel's movement. He said that there were 150,000 Algerians fighting with the French against the rebels, whose forces number 30,000.

A Bomb Tests

Mr. Batault said that France would explode an atomic bomb in the Sahara Desert in the near future, but he mentioned no date. He said that France was not conducting the experiment in atomic energy by choice. He said that France will be forced to conduct atomic experiments because the Western nations refuse to share atomic secrets with France. Batault said that a policy of this nature would be understandable if the Russians did not have the atomic bomb.

Ike Upset Over Colleges' Refusal To Accept Funds

WASHINGTON, (UPI)—President Eisenhower said yesterday he understood why some universities objected to the special loyalty oath required of students seeking government loans, but he deplored their refusal to participate in the program.

The President was asked at his news conference what he thought of recent action by some colleges and universities withdrawing from the student loan program set up by the Defense Education Act.

In reply to the question, the President said he had disliked one part of the oath but had signed the bill so the entire program could be put into effect.

The oath in the student loan program requires applicants to swear loyalty to the United States and to deny membership in any organization seeking to overthrow the government of this country.

LAST CHANCE TODAY FOR SENTINEL PICTURES

Today is the last day for Sentinel pictures, Jane Borden, Sentinel editor, has announced. Photographs will be taken from 7 to 9 p.m. in Conference Room 4 of the Lodge.

According to Miss Borden, Robert Catlin of Catlin's Studio is taking the pictures. She said reprints may be ordered from the studio.

Ike Says U.S. Will Not Advise on Birth Control

WASHINGTON, (UPI)—President Eisenhower firmly declared yesterday that the U. S. government will have absolutely nothing to do with advising other nations on birth control "as long as I am here."

"That's not our business," he told his news conference.

The president was asked for his reaction to a recommendation by his special foreign aid committee last July which has been interpreted as suggesting this government should distribute birth control information to other countries on request.

CHURCH OFFICIAL SAYS IKE'S ACTION DISGRACE

DETROIT, (UPI)—The executive director of the Church World Service said today it would be a "disgrace" if the United States refused aid to underdeveloped countries for birth control.

(Pres. Eisenhower yesterday said the United States would have nothing to do with giving information to foreign countries on birth control.)

Rev. Dr. R. Norris Wilson, who represents the National Council of Churches as head of its overseas relief arm, said contraception was the only immediate means of avoiding starvation in many underdeveloped nations.

He said the United States had a direct responsibility to provide public funds to aid nations facing this threat.

NO PROGRESS BETWEEN DEGAULLE AND ADENAUER

PARIS, (UPI)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and French President Charles de Gaulle failed to resolve their differences on European defense today after two days of talks, informed sources said.

In London, Anglo-Italian talks ended on a better note with full accord voiced by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and Premier Antonio Segni.

'59 Yearbook Should Be Ready After Holidays, Says Romstad

Reports on the 1959 Sentinel, student-faculty committees and Public Relations committee's Christmas program were given at Central Board last night.

Freshman delegate Buzz Romstad said that distribution of the 1959 annual should begin shortly after Christmas vacation. Romstad said that all material is now in for the book.

ASMSU vice-president Duane Adams said that one student member of each student-faculty committee has been asked to report on progress of his committee at the next Central Board meeting.

Adams said that in the past, most students have not been aware of the work of such committees. Reports from student members would let the students know what the committees are doing he said. Walter Brown, faculty delegate, suggested that students might be represented on the faculty budget-policy committee.

ASMSU president Ed Risse explained that members of Planning Board tried to get representation on the committee last year but were unable to do so.

Kathy Joseph was appointed to investigate possibilities of student representation on the budget-policy committee.

Jerry Agen, chairman of Public Relations committee, asked for representatives to speak at each house Thursday night about the committee's Christmas program.

The representatives would explain the program, under which MSU students would speak to high

Trumpets and Irony

A single event has filled the political air of Montana, rare that it is, with a blare of trumpets and an irony that bears considerable further investigation.

There is an old saying, "While the cat's away, the mice will play." And this is true of Montana politics this week. Governor Aronson has left the state to attend meetings in the east, and while he is gone, Lieutenant Governor Paul Cannon has busied himself with answering charges of corruption and issuing orders to the Highway Department that reminds one of a banana republic dictator. While this is quite a departure from the usual "let it take care of itself" attitude that surrounds State government, it is nevertheless standard operating procedure for Dr. Cannon when he finds himself at the tiller of the ship of state, regardless of the length of time he remains there.

One of the meetings Governor Aronson is attending on his trip to the east coast is the Council of State Governments, which is being held in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia. The irony lies in the fact that Governor Aronson is a member of the Governor's Conference Committee on Roads and Highway Safety. This year, Montana has had a total of 219 deaths attributed to highway accidents. This compares with 183 at this time last year and a total of 193 for all of 1958. This is one of the worst traffic records in the nation in proportion to the population of a state. Looking back on the record, it would be interesting to know what Governor Aronson will be able to contribute to the Committee's meetings that would lead to greater safety on the highways.

From indications given by the 1959 Legislature, there is little hope that much will be done in the near future that will contribute to fewer deaths on the highways of Montana. However hope springs eternal, and it might be that the 1961 Legislature will enact legislation that would improve Montana's record of highway deaths. The last session did the opposite.

'Round the Oval With Beley

Try for Two

Gene Beley

One year ago a University student started Montana Sports Outdoors magazine in a closet. On its first anniversary, the magazine is a successful operation and growing in circulation.

"We were forewarned we would fail," said its founder-publisher Richard Edgerton.

Edgerton graduated last year.

The success of the magazine can be partially attributed to Edgerton's analyzing other magazines before he went into business. Through studying other publications, he learned the reason for many failures.

Edgerton conceived MSO through his interest in Montana, its people and wildlife.

"National magazines had been featuring Montana material consistently. I figured there was enough material in the state to start an exclusive Montana magazine."

Edgerton proved himself right. The state has provided a wealth of material.

People are always interested in people. MSO believes in this and practices this philosophy. Every month the magazine features interesting Montanans, whom Edgerton terms "among the most colorful in the nation."

The young publication has between 56 to 60 correspondents who contribute material. Edgerton said his job and that of the staff's is acting as a coordinator for the magazine. Most of the written material is supplied by these free lance writers.

Future plans for the magazine, of course, are to expand. Pointing to the year's accumulation of magazine covers on the office wall, Edgerton said that a color cover is to be featured on next month's issue. Edgerton hopes eventually that the Missoula-based publication will be comparable to Arizona Highways magazine. Arizona Highways is published with the majority of its pages in full color. It is distributed nationally and is one of the most acclaimed public relation devices of the state.

Montana Sports Outdoors magazine is already being distributed in a number of other states.

"Reception to our magazine has been like a snowball on the top of a hill. Frequently, letters arrive from out of state from the far corners of the United States. People write and tell us they didn't know such a magazine existed . . . then ask us to please send a subscription."

Frank Hemingway, a radio commentator, was one of the many people who have discovered the new magazine. He told his radio listeners about it.

The editor of MSO is Martin Onishuk.

At a downtown news stand, a man was thumbing through the new issues of MSO.

"You know," he said to the news stand operator, "those two young men have been putting this magazine out for a year now."

"Yes," said the news dealer. "And it looks like they're going to try for two."

During these last two weeks of the quarter, college men get some dating competition from a strange source. This is about the time girls begin going steady with text books.

Overhead on the oval: "There's more faculty parking space than students' . . . enough for three cars for every teacher."

And, ironically, more teachers than students seem to ride bicycles.

BAGHDAD, Iraq (UPI)—Premier Abdel Karim Kassem announced yesterday that he has "fully recovered" from the bullet wounds of the October attempt on his life and will leave the hospital today.

U Students Form Table Tennis Club

Fifty-seven MSU students are engaged in a preliminary table tennis tournament, Wilbert G. De Flyer, president of the MSU Table Tennis Club, said yesterday.

De Flyer said that the challenge tournament is open to anyone with an interest in the sport. The outcome of the play will determine the rank of players in future competition.

De Flyer went on to say that the club has plans for future inter-collegiate competition. At the moment they have tentatively scheduled a meet with Montana State College to be held sometime during winter quarter.

The club has recently become affiliated with the United States Table Tennis Assn., he said. He explained that this is a national group that has been in existence since 1933, and that the MSU club is the first Montana affiliate of the national organization. All 50 states, with the exception of Alaska and North Dakota, have clubs belonging to the U.S.T.T.A., De Flyer said.

The playing room at Simpkins Hall will be open from 3 to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday for anyone interested in entering the tournament, De Flyer said.

Delegate Requests Newspaper Query

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—A Jordanian delegate yesterday called for a Congressional investigation of American newspapers and the "serious and dangerous practice of misinformation adopted by some of the leading papers in the big cities."

Dr. Muhammad El-Farra, director of U.N. affairs in Jordan's foreign ministry, told the General Assembly's social, humanitarian and cultural committee that newspaper dissemination of false information was more dangerous than rigged television shows.

"Indeed such investigation should have priority over investigating show business," he said. "In fact, while some may argue that Congress has no business investigating show business or that such shows—rigged or otherwise—are good entertainment, no one can argue that an investigation of newspapers and news networks who are sheltering their practices under the umbrella of freedom of information is not important to protect public interest."

school seniors about MSU during the Christmas vacation, to each living group and will distribute applications, he said.

Risse suggested the program would not be as effective in large high schools as in small ones due to the difficulty of organizing meetings of the high school students during the vacation.

Agen replied that it is the first year for the program and called it "a good stab in the dark for MSU public relations."

Risse said that some MSU students would be home earlier than the Friday of final week (Dec. 18) and might be able to talk to the seniors while the high schools are still in session. Others will be returning Tuesday, Jan. 5, and might arrange to speak to seniors on Monday, Jan. 4, he said.

In reply to a question about covering all the high schools in the state, Agen said that the committee does not expect to have a speaker for each high school.

Dave Morris asked if the pool tables in the basement of the women's center are available for student use.

Dean Andrew C. Cogswell said that they are and that the Women's Center was the only space available when the basement of the Lodge was made in to the Room (now the College Inn).

Risse explained a plan for having an agenda of business and reports ready before Central Board meets. He said all business to be brought to the meetings should be posted on the bulletin board on the ASMSU office door by the delegates, committee chairmen or students. A note explaining the business or report should also be left on his desk, Risse said.

Having the agenda before the meeting will allow its publication in the Kaimin before Central Board meets and will give students and delegates a chance to review matters before presentation, he said.
